The matter listings may include peculiar activity, complaints, investigations and prosecutions. BankruptcyMisconduct.com or Next Factors, Inc. or any other persons may have instigated referrals, investigations, or prosecutions related to some of these matters. BankruptcyMisconduct.com wishes to remind all viewers of information on this web site that every person, including law firms and their partner and associate attorneys, should be considered innocent until proven guilty. Allegations are merely allegations unless and until such matters are adjudicated in a proper and fair venue. Sadly, Bankruptcy Misconduct committed by powerful law firms and their attorney members all too often escapes genuine and meaningful review by the governmental entities.

Listings may link to documents which we believe are valid, but the links and documents themselves may be withdrawn, superseded, stricken, updated, or otherwise invalid and each viewer is cautioned to independently confirm any information or document link with any corresponding source. All factual elements are as they appear in corresponding public filings, all non factual information is the opinion of bankruptcyMisconduct.com or the content contributor. Listings may reference an originating bankruptcy case and track progress by certain parties related to possible misconduct or crimes. Entries may reference explicit events and may include running status commentary. If you would like to suggest an entry or respond to an entry, please contact us.
